I am a single woman living at the above address with my parents. I am engaged to Charles Edward Pearce. Most Saturday nights Charles and I usually go out with Charles's sister Nadine and her husband Eardley, to the local pub the Gunmakers arms on Gerrard Street, Newtown. Tonight at about 9.30pm we all went to the Gunmakers arms and had the usual drink. After the pub had closed we went to Nadine's house to check that everything was o.k. with the children. We met Nadine's next door neighbour, Sharon and her boyfriend David and we all decided to go for a curry at the Sky Blue Indian restaurant on the Hagley Rd. We all walked up to the restaurant. We went into the restaurant and asked for a table for six. They had only got one table for six and that was at the far left hand side of the room, so we all went and sat at that. I then went straight to the toilet and went back to the table, after. I didn't notice if there was anyone else in the room because I normally keep myself to myself. After a couple of minutes we ordered our meal. Then we started to have a laugh about the argument that me and nadine had last week. I was apologising to her for walking out and she said that I was sorry for doing it. Then the curries arrived and we started eating. We all commented on how nice the curry was. Charke was facing me at the table and the next thing I knew Charke stood up and I noticed he was talking to someone behind me. I didn't hear what was said. I turned around to have a look at who he was talking to. I saw an asian man about 20-22yrs old about 5'7" very thin, and he was with a white girl JW with dyed blonde short hair. I noticed that the asian had was what I thought a table knife in his right hand. He was pointing the knife at Clarke. I said to the asian, "There's no need for that" Charke walked past me. The next thing I knew everybody was screaming and shouting and I turned around and stood up, and I saw Clarke lying curled up on his left hand side and he seemed to be having difficulty in breathing. I saw a lot of blood on the floor around Clarke. I then shouted out, "get an ambulance". The staff of the Indian restaurant just stood there looking, and the one who had got the knife just pushed past me and said, "Move you slag" He stepped over clarke and ran out through the front door. I kept on shouting to the staff to get the ambulance but they just stood there. Eventually a white bloke who was having a curry on his own went to the telephone and phoned the police. The Girl with the bleached blonde hair followed the asian with the knife
